- Feasibility study is carried out to select the best system that meets performance requirement.
- The main aim of feasibility study is to determine whether it would be financially and technically feasible to develop system.
- The feasible study involves analysis of problem and collection of all relevant information related to system such as different data items which would be input to the system, the processing required to carry out these data, and output that expected these system can produce.

There are following kind of feasibility study is performed:

Technical feasibility

Economic feasibility

Operational feasibility

Technical Feasibility

- ✓ This is concerned with specifying equipment and software that will meet user requirement.
- ✓ Project developed in ASP.NET technology With MVC, on Windows 8.
- ✓ Client require only browser to operate.

Economic feasibility

- ✓ From the financial perspective project is feasible.

1. Tool : Microsoft Visual studio 2012.
2. Front End : ASP.Net with C# , MVC-3
,HTML-5,jQuery,JSON.
3. Back End : Microsoft SQL Server 2008.

3. Requirement Gathering and Analysis

3.1 Requirement Gathering

- ✓ We conducted several meetings and discussed on various aspects of the system and collected information about the proposed system to be developed by us. By analyzing the workflow, we got a proper understanding of the ‘requirements’.
- ✓ The meetings were conducted as and when necessary to collect the requirements.
- ✓ Communicating with the project manager exposed us to the basic functionality of the system, so we became aware of our target which had to be met within the predefined deadline.
- ✓ We set milestones and baselines so that we could proceed with the system development as per the schedule.
- ✓ Direct communication through meetings introduced us to the current scenario and provided us with the basic guidelines on which our system would be developed.
- ✓ Free flow of ideas made us understand the benefits of our system. Our motto was to develop a quality product; so we laid emphasis on ‘Quality Control’ right from the time when we understood the concept.
- ✓ During the meetings, we recorded/documentated the key points. After understanding the reason as to why we were developing the system and how our system would tackle problems, we prepared a document prototype. The document gave us an idea about the workflow of our software. In brief, the document guided us to develop the system in right way and correct us whenever we stayed away from our goals.
- ✓ Meetings were held to understand the business processes and basic requirements. Also, the information related to their business constraints was gathered.
- ✓ Detailed analysis of the existing system was done and its current workflow was understood.

3.1.1 Requirement Analysis

Requirement analysis involves studying the workflow of the proposed system. The process of requirement analysis is carried out in three steps:

- (1) Requirement Anticipation
- (2) Requirement Investigation
- (3) Requirement Specification

Requirement Anticipation:

Requirement Anticipation is very important part of system designing. It is to predict the future requirements based on the past experience of user attitude. We have anticipated the requirements by careful analysis. We have played an active role in the analysis of the software. Thus, most of the requirements were judged well in advance. Proper assessment was done regarding the possible futures of this software.

Requirement Investigation:

Requirement Investigation is the actual study of the system. It involves an accurate study of what all aspects a product/software/website would cover.

Requirement Specification:

The information gathered during the system study was analyzed to determine the requirement specifications. Based on the issues governing the system, the requirements in non-technical terms were formulated. We need to develop rough prototype to check the basic functionality of the system. If the major modules are not working properly, then the system might not satisfy the user.

3.2 Risk management

|---|---|
| After gathering basic requirements, feasibility study and studying the functionality of proposed system, we assessed, collect project possible risk and found following risk for the project: Possible risk | Risk management technique |
| Team culture | Work need to be distributed amongs team member. Group cornidation is critical. |
| Project deadline | Need to estimate duration time and develop project within time period. That is major problem in most project. |
| Misconception of functionality | If software functionality is not analysed properly there is possibility of misconception of functionality. |
| Change in technology | Only thing is permanent is change. And there is possibility of change in technology. |
| Change in functionality | After software is developed there may be change in functionality. |

This testing is done after completion of Unit Test and Sub-System Testing. This type of testing is particularly important for object oriented system.

After tested the system with unit testing. 1

The system then is tested using integrating testing. In integrating testing all forms inter-relation is tested. We have tested the system with most of the inter-relationship between forms. I.e. Integrating Testing. Unit No.
